Caregiver Support

Why is caregiver support important?

Martha is the primary caregiver for her elderly father who lives with her. Martha prepares her father's breakfast and lunch before she goes to work. She also washes his clothes and drives him to his medical appointments. At times, Martha feels upset, tired, and has a hard time sleeping at night. A friend encouraged Martha to talk with her provider. Her provider was able to share information on getting support for herself and her father. By learning about caregiver resources and self-care, she feels supported and better prepared to care for her father at home.

What are some considerations for caregiver support?

- Feeling tired
- Feeling sadness or guilt
- Easily irritated or angry
- Stressing about not having enough money
- Feeling stuck with no one else to assist
- Fearful about the future

Caregiver support provides resources and services to assist caregivers and their loved ones. This may include ways to support the caregiver's emotional, physical, and spiritual wellbeing.

Questions to ask yourself:

- Have you been irritable or angry?
- Are you feeling overwhelmed?
- Do you wish you had more support to care for your loved one?
- Is the stress of caregiving making it difficult for you to sleep?
